Ecology, society and appropriation of science

Workshop Discussion Exposition

2023 Atelier

Description

History

Throughout history, capitalism in its various political expressions has wanted to use science to justify its aberrations such as "human nature" or "the law of the jungle", where the selfish or the physically strongest will take the dominant position in a society. But how true is it that science supports these political views, does this really happen in nature, what is our role in mitigating climate change, how do we plan, without planning, for "a world where we are socially equal, humanly different and totally free"? Evolution not only developed claws and teeth, it developed solidarity, empathy, conscience, mutualism and self-defence.
